Public Understanding of the Value Proposition

Too often the value proposition of natural gas is simply unappreciated. This is in part because the delivery and use of the product has been so seamless, and its price so affordable, that people haven't focused on it. The downside of this lack of focus is a lack of understanding: and in the midst of this lack of understanding comes mounting criticism of natural gas as a problem. This panel will focus on different aspects of the value proposition that can be emphasized to build public support.

MODERATOR:

David Yager, President, Yager Management

PANELISTS:

- Crystal Smith, Chief Councillor, Haisla Nation
- Michael Eddy, Head of Indigenous Relations, LNG Canada
- Cody Battershill, Founder, canadaaction.ca
- Richard Laszlo, Consultant, Laszlo Energy Services

Domestic Markets

Canada's historical gas export customer, the United States, is now its main competitor. Along with developing LNG export markets, Canadian producers are faced with finding new domestic natural gas markets. This session will explore where those markets might be found.

MODERATOR:

James Rose, Editor, BOE Report

PANELISTS:

- Paul Cheliak, Vice President, Public and Regulatory Affairs, Canadian Gas Association
- Dinara Millington, CERl
- Jay White, VP Commercial, TransCanada

The Regulatory Framework: Making it as Efficient as Possible

The regulatory framework in Canada affecting natural gas is complex. Economic regulators at the provincial level determine the build-out of local infrastructure, and environmental/energy regulators at the provincial and federal levels set legislative, regulatory and policy rules for infrastructure around the extraction, processing and transmission of the resource. This session will assess what works and what doesn't.

MODERATOR:

Rowland Harrison, Former NEB Member, Editor, Energy Regulation Quarterly

PANELISTS:

- Martha Hall Findlay, CEO, Canada West Foundation
- Sander Duncanson, Partner, Osler, Hoskin & Harcourt
- Moin Yahya, Professor, Faculty of Law, University of Alberta
- Chris Bloomer, CEO, Canadian Energy Pipeline Association
